

Notes on Contributors

Abhisek Ghosal holds an MA (English) and an M. Phil from The University of Burdwan, West Bengal, India. He is currently pursuing doctoral studies at the Department of Humanities and Social Sciences, Indian Institute of Technology, Kharagpur. His areas of research include South Asian Literature, Diaspora Studies, Globalization Studies, Criminology, Victimology, and Transnational Justice Studies. He has published scholarly articles in peer-reviewed and University Grant Commission-approved journals.

Email: abhisekghosal419@gmail.com

Agnes S. K. Yeow teaches at the Department of English, Faculty of Arts and Social Sciences, Universiti Malaya. She received her PhD from the National University of Singapore in 2004 with a dissertation on Joseph Conrad. Her research interests lie in the areas of twentieth-century fiction and ecocritical theory and practice. She is particularly interested in re-evaluating Malaysian literature from an ecocritical perspective.

Email: agnesyw@um.edu.my

Amin Amirdabbaghian is a researcher in Persian and Turkic languages at the Curatorial Affairs Department, Islamic Arts Museum Malaysia, Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia.

Email: amirdabbaghian@iamm.org.my

Anitha Devi Pillai is an applied linguist and teacher educator at the National Institute of Education (NTU, Singapore), where she teaches courses on writing pedagogy and writing skills. She has authored five books, including From Kerala to Singapore: Voices from the Singapore Malayalee Community (2017), From Estate to Embassy: Memories of an Ambassador (2019), and The Story of Onam (in press). She has also published academic papers, poems, stories and newspaper articles. Her next creative project is a translation of Kamaladevi Aravindan's Tamil historical novel based on the lives of Indians in Singapore and Malaysia, titled Sembawang.

Email: anitha.pillai@nie.edu.sg

Da Ye Kim is a second-year doctoral student of Cinema Studies at the Tisch School of the Arts New York University, USA. She holds a BA in Psychology from Johns Hopkins University and an MA in Cinema Studies from NYU. Her research interests include interactive media, virtual reality, cultural studies and contemporary Korean media. She has also been working as a film translator since 2014.

Email: dyk285@nyu.edu

Geraldine Tan Le Ting is in the final year of her Master's programme in the English Division of the School of Humanities at Nanyang Technological University, Singapore. Her primary research interests are in Southeast-Asian literature, postcolonial literature and women's literature. Her MA thesis explores depictions of family in Singaporean Literature.

Email: GERALDIN001@e.ntu.edu.sg

Hannah Ho Ming Yit is Lecturer in English Literature at Universiti Brunei Darussalam. She holds a PhD in Contemporary Asian Diasporic Literature from the University of York, UK. She has held research fellowships at Kings' College London, UK and the University of California-Berkeley, USA. Her current research interests include Southeast Asian literature with a focus on Brunei Darussalam. Her co-edited volume Engaging Modern Brunei: Language, Literature and Culture is forthcoming from Springer.

Email: hannah.ho@ubd.edu.bn

Jiaying Sim is Assistant Professor in the Department of Humanities and Social Sciences at DigiPen Institute of Technology, Singapore. She received her PhD in Film and Television Studies from the University of Glasgow, UK. Her research interests include transnational Chinese cinema, Singapore cinema, bodies on screens, film philosophy and affect studies.

Email: jiaying.sim@digipen.edu

Kok Su Mei is Senior Lecturer at the Department of English, Faculty of Arts and Social Sciences, Universiti Malaya. She is interested in English Renaissance drama, with particular emphasis on the ways local contexts have shaped their production and reception, both in early modern England and contemporary Malaysia. Her current research projects focus on the use of butoh in Southeast Asian adaptations of Shakespeare, and on the usage of Shakespearean allusions in Malaysian politics, respectively.

Email: smkok@um.edu.my

Krishnavanie Shunmugam is Senior Lecturer in Translation Studies at the Department of English Language, Faculty of Languages and Linguistics, University of Malaya, Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia.

Email: krishnav@um.edu.my

Linda Wells is from Melbourne, Australia. She spent three decades in Central Australia, working in education and community development, conducting guided walking tours and writing. She is the author of two books: Still a Town Like Alice, published by the Alice Springs Town Council, 2011; and Kultitja; Memoir of an Outback Schoolteacher, Ginninderra Press, 2016. Linda is currently undertaking a PhD in history and creative writing with Deakin University, Melbourne.

Email: ljwells@bigpond.net.au

Mahdi Teimouri gained his PhD in English Literature from Universiti Malaya in 2014. He is now teaching at the English Department of Khayyam University, a private university in his hometown of Mashhad, Iran. His interests are in the fields of postcolonial and postmodern studies as well as the ethical philosophy of Levinas. His more recent work has focused on the fiction of J. M. Coetzee.

Email: teymoori58@yahoo.com

Min Joo Lee is a PhD candidate at the Department of Gender Studies at the University of California, Los Angeles, USA. Lee's research focuses on issues of gender, sexuality, and race in South Korea and its transnational contexts. Her current research project examines the implications of the cultural phenomenon of the "Hallyu," including the gendered and racial impact of Hallyu tourists on imaginings of South Korean culture and society.

Email: leemj308@gmail.com

Nicholas O. Pagan is Visiting Professor of English at Universiti Malaya, Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia. He specializes in literary theory. His books include Literature, Memory, Hegemony: East/West Crossings (co-edited with Sharmani P. Gabriel, 2018). His essays have appeared in, for example, Interdisciplinary Literary Studies: A Journal of Criticism and Theory; Journal of Language, Literature, and Culture; Mosaic: A Journal for the Interdisciplinary Study of Literature; Philological Quarterly; and PsyArt: An Online Journal for the Psychological Study of the Arts.

Email: nicholas.pagan@um.edu.my

Rachel P. Pitlongay is Assistant Professor and the current Chair of the Department of Language, Literature and the Arts at the University of the Philippines-Baguio. Her current interests include issues of representation and cultural identity in literature and other media forms such as film. Her current research delves around highland-lowland relationships both within the text and in the formation of the text in the Philippines.

Email: rppitlongay@up.edu.ph

Shahla Naghiyeva is Associate Professor in Translation Studies at the Department of Literature of Foreign Countries, Azerbaijan University of Languages, Baku, Azerbaijan.

Email: shnagiyeva@adu.edu.az

Sharifah Aishah Osman is Senior Lecturer at the Department of English, Faculty of Arts and Social Sciences, Universiti Malaya. Her research focuses on the intersections between feminism and literature for children and young adults in Malaysia. She is co-editor of The Principal Girl: Feminist Tales from Asia (2019), and is a chapter contributor on Malaysian folktales and folk tale adaptations for the volume, Making Heritage in Malaysia: Sites, Histories, Identities (Palgrave Macmillan, 2020).

Email: saosman@um.edu.my

Shalini Nadaswaran is Senior Lecturer at the Department of English, Universiti Malaya, Kuala Lumpur. She holds a PhD in English specializing in African Women's Literature from the University of New South Wales, Sydney, Australia. Her research interests include the evolving representations of women in local and global spaces. She has published in the field of African literature and women's literature in journals such as African Literature Today, Matatu, Wasafiri and Tulsa Studies in Women's Literature and in various essay collections. While her primary focus falls under the remit of African (Women's) literature, she also has interests in research that explores modern day slavery, literature and injustice, and the figure of the child in postcolonial literature.

Email: shalininadaswaran@um.edu.my

Wernmei Yong Ade is Assistant Professor of English in the School of Humanities at Nanyang Technological University, where she teaches and researches in the areas of Feminist Studies and Contemporary Women's Writing, Critical Theory and Love. She also co-ordinates the Gender and Diversity Research Cluster at the School of Humanities, and is a member of the steering committee for the International Society for the Study of Gender and Love. Her publications include two edited collections, The Contemporary Arts as Political Practice in Singapore (Palgrave Macmillan, 2016) and Fluid Gender, Fluid Love (Brill, 2018), as well as articles in SARE, Moving Worlds, Philosophy Today and Literary Theory. Her current research focuses on women/ writing/ love.

Email: WMYong@ntu.edu.sg